

NEW UNIVERSE: discovering other possibilities.

In the wake of becoming a mother and the following relationship developed with her daughter, an interest to explore the learning processes was born for visual artist Irene Pérez. What and how we learn, when do we learn, where do we learn, and from whom do we learn are some of the ideas that Pérez has been exploring through the works that are part of this exhibition.

New Universe presents a group of works that take as their starting point moments and experiences within the family and in particular through the child-mother relationship. From these experiences, Irene Pérez's creations explore ideas related to discovery, invention and the unknown. Thus, there are pieces born from daily activities such as playing, time spent with family and care labor.

“New Universe: discovering other possibilities” is a journey through the relationships between parents and children, but above all the artist would like to be a reflection on all the things we rediscover and all the new things we learn that changes us forever when we have children.
